Screening

Your resume will be screened. If we believe you might be a match for a role you've applied for, you'll enter our hiring process.

While the hiring process may differ slightly for different roles, teams or regions, the basics apply whether you're applying for a tech job or a sales job, or a leadership position. Not all of these may apply for your role, but here are some of the ways we assess candidates in our hiring process.

Screening call

Before going to the in-depth interview, you will have one or two shorter conversations over the phone or video. Usually, you will have one with a recruiter and then with the hiring manager.

Sometimes we ask candidates to complete a small project such as preparing for a case study, preparing a writing sample, or writing code. This can be asked prior to the in-depth interview or after the in-depth interview. No worries, this helps us to understand how you think and approach problems.

In-depth interviews:

Our interview can be rigorous. Having multiple interviews in one day is possible (over video or in person). This gives you and us the opportunity getting to know each other. It gives us the ability to assess your skills and see if you, the role, the team, and the company are a match.

Decision/Offer

After the final interview, we'll be in touch to let you know if you were the best candidate for the role. If you were, we will reach out to you with an offer.

If things don't work out, don't let that stop you from applying to other roles in the future.

FAQ

In which countries do you hire?

With offices across the globe, with over 380 employees serving clients in +100 countries. You can check job opportunities by location. Submit your resume through our website www.datacolor.com/careers/

How long does the whole application process take?

This depends on different factors (i.e., which role you are applying to, how fast the applicant responds, the number of applications that the recruiters receive, etc.) Know that we are working as quickly as we can to get through applications.

Can I get referred for a job?

Yes, you can! Datacolor has a referral program available for their team members. If you know someone working for Datacolor, ask them to refer you.

What is Datacolor's culture like in general?

We're a friendly, collaborative bunch of people who are passionate about what we do. We're approachable and willing to help when needed. We enjoy having new people.

What benefits do you offer?

Datacolor offers a comprehensive benefits package designed to support employees and their families. Benefits vary from country to country. They are mentioned in the job description, or you can contact the recruiter for more information.

Do you have remote work?

The ability to work remotely depends on the job, and the structure of the team. Some teams are globally distributed, others need to be on-site due to the nature of the job.

Datacolor believes in human connection, therefore we have a hybrid schedule where we go to the office a couple of days per week.
